YOUNG CHINA DISCREDITED BY HER OWN DELEGATES

Foreign Consular Court Assailed In Latest Anfuite Move

BIG NEED FOR IT.

Extra-Territoriality Abolition Would Halt Republic's Progress

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Our Peking Correspondent)

Peking, April 12.—The way in which the aspiration of Young China is so often discredited by Young China itself is admirably illustrated by the attitude of China's delegates to the convention of the International Bar Association in Tokio. Here again is evidence that many of the foreign-educated Chinese are still living in as thin a haze of glib phrases as that which enveloped the larger part of Young China in 1911 and 1912. And it is a pity to see such good ammunition given to those foreign reactionaries who instinctively obstruct every attempt of the younger generation of China to break the bindings of the past.

One of the Chinese delegates in Tokio, Mr. Yeh Hsia-sheng, presumably speaking for the whole delegation, protests against the foreign Consular Court in China and asks for the abolition of extra-territoriality.

"The system of the Consular Court is only adopted in a country where the working organs of Law are very imperfect," he says. "When legal operations attain a certain standard, the system of counsel is perfected, and natives and foreigners alike are subjected to equal treatment under the Law, the Consular Court need no longer exist.

FAR FETCHED STATEMENT IN VIEW OF THE FACTS

"Furthermore, foreign residents would prefer, at this stage of legal progress, to receive equal treatment before the Law with natives, rather than appear before a Court handled by a Consul who possesses neither legal knowledge nor experience."

And he goes on to say that foreigners "feel secure and have confidence in the native courts and that "in view of the fact that the adoption of the jury system even is being discussed in Oriental countries, the need for the Consular Court is difficult to find."

Is it? Let me cite just one instance that shows such a need. For some months there has been pending the trial of the editor of the Peking Kuo Ming Kung Pao, charged with violation of the press law, his actual offense being that he attacked the pro-Japanese policy of the government. A few weeks ago the case came up for decision. The defendant was acquitted.

Thereby and therefrom hangs a tale. The acquittal was an accident. It was to have been a conviction, but a sale of curios outside the Chienmen intervened. One of the higher officials of the court was at the sale. He, being a trusted lieutenant of the government, was charged with the duty of preventing an acquittal. But as he was away, the case was decided only on its merits.

JUDGE WHO HELD OUT FOR ACQUITTAL ARRESTED

Next day there was furore. Mr. Chu Shen, Minister of Justice, stormed. The Anfu Club, source of Mr. Chu's inspiration, stormed even more fiercely. And a few days later one of the three judges, he who had held out most strongly for acquittal, was arrested. He was arrested in a "raid." He was at the home of friends and they were just beginning to play sparrow. And he was arrested—for gambling! The unconscious humor of that is exquisite. For gambling is the principal activity of Peking officialdom. And he was tried and fined $5 and is therefore disqualified from acting as judge. The other two judges have also been given plain enough intimation that they may as well look for other jobs. And the defendant—he is still in jail, acquittal or no acquittal.

That, I can say without exaggeration, is the administration of justice in China and it is for such an administration, presided over by that distinguished Anfuite, Mr. Chu Shen, that the Chinese delegate in Tokio pictured foreigners as longing for. These are the sort of judges that are to be preferred to our poor Consuls "who possess

Bolsheviki 'Upper Ten' Hold Sway In Kremlin, Smiling On Profiteers

Lenin's Communist Rule Has Installed A Lesser Measure Of Communism In Practice Than Existed In Belligerent European Countries During The War—Proletarian 'Bourgeoisie' Is Fast Developing

In this, the fifth article of his series on conditions in the Russia of today and the results of Bolshevism, Mr. Eyre, Paris correspondent of The New York World, reveals how the all-powerful Bolshevik "Upper Ten" in the Russian Communist Government has in two years brought about a smaller measure of Communism than existed during the war. Lenin, Trotsky, Litovieff and others are living in grandeur; the "common people" are underfed and only those peasants with plenty of food supplies or money and the profiteers, who prosper with the help of the Soviet leaders, have any measure of comfort. Mr. Eyre was the first correspondent to enter Russia and study the actual conditions there since the end of the world war. What he has uncovered shows that, even though the Soviet leaders are hard-working and enthusiastic in their plans for an ideal Russia, they are failing in the very aims for which they sought. These articles first appeared in The New York World. In THE CHINA PRESS tomorrow, writing from Paris, Mr. Eyre tells what Trotsky's victories have cost Russia.

BY LINCOLN EYRE

RIGA (by courier to Berlin), February 26.—In wartime France, England or Germany no man could obtain for love or money more than a specified maximum of food, fuel or the household requirements. In wartime and revolutionary Russia, ruled by a communist dictatorship, any man with enough thousand rouble notes can buy all the food and warmth he desires.

Throughout the war dwellers in London, Paris or Berlin affected by war conditions (and that meant practically everybody) were freed of paying rent by moratorium. Residents of Moscow and Petrograd are still obliged to pay rent and at a far higher figure than in pre-war days.

These two incontrovertible facts are evidence that an all-powerful Bolshevik in the Communist Government has in two years installed a lesser measure of Communism in actual practice than existed in the belligerent European countries during the war years. To my mind this is one of the severest, albeit the most rarely mentioned, indictments of the Bolshevists' vast communistic program, since it reveals their impotency to attain their initial aim—the abolition of classes. They claim, however, that when the war blockade and country revolutionary uprisings no longer harass them they will soon overcome speculation and other evils that foster inequality and thereby menace realisation of Communism. They argue moreover, that inasmuch as existing abnormal circumstances make these evils unavoidable their temporary toleration by the Soviet Government shows the latter's realistic grasp on the situation, which in turn demonstrates its ability to govern. They point out that the revolution—meaning, of course, the Bolshevist revolution of November 7, 1917—was not expected to establish Communism overnight. It was merely expected to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat as a first step toward the Socialistic commonwealth sought by the disciples of Karl Marx. The dictatorship of the proletariat means simply the forcible seizure by the industrial workers and peasants or small farmers of the National Government and national wealth, including all organs of production. In other words, the propertied classes are dispossessed in favor of the non-propertied classes.

Capital Still Accumulated

In order that the dictators in the mass of workers and peasants shall share equitably in the national wealth, all productive enterprises, including the land, are, in principle, nationalised, that is, become the property of the state. Neither private ownership nor money as a medium of labor compensation, however, has been abolished, and with either in existence Communism is obviously an impossibility.

All that the revolution has sought to do up to the present is to control both, without any considerable measure of success. For while capitalism in the larger sense of the term has been destroyed, together with private ownership on a large scale, capital continues to be accumulated and to make its influence felt. One man may still possess more than another in worldly goods and receive higher pay for his work. Equality of material possessions is as non-existent in the Russian social republic as it is in the American "bourgeois" republic.

Hence there are coming into existence new groupings of Russian population, new lines of economic demarcation, new forms of social standing and of wealth. The beginning of two new aristocracies are delectable. One is found in the governmental hierarchy, the other in the ever-increasing speculator class. Each is dependent upon the other, for speculators can operate only with the tacit consent of the Soviets, and the Soviets, for the moment at least, cannot do without the speculators (which means all persons engaged in private trading). Governmental aristocracy has its boots imbedded in the Kremlin, that ancient Moscow citadel out of which there grew the far-flung might of the Romanoff dynasty.

In Soviet Russia today one speaks of the Kremlin as one spoke of Versailles in the magnificent days of Louis XIV. To dwell within its sacred precincts, to which none save the elect have ingress, is to be of those in whose hands repose the present day destinies of the greatest Caucasian nation. Only the most eminent commissaries of the people and a few other Soviet stars of the first magnitude are domiciled there in the grandiose palaces that once housed the most famous figures of Muscovite history.

Chieftains Reign Like Tsars

Protected behind numerous barriers of bayonets and machine guns, the Bolshevist chieftains have made this barbarically gorgeous nesting place of Oriental autocracy the throbbing nerve center of world revolution. Within its buttressed walls they plan the progress of revolutionary Russia, and from its frowning gates they sally forth in their high power limousines on affairs of state even as the Tsars in their day went forth to superintend the administration of their colossal heritage.

Bolshevism's upper ten are in the Kremlin. The lesser lights of the Bolshevist aristocracy must content themselves with quarters in the "Soviet houses," which were the city's leading hotels, and are now nationalised habitations reserved for prominent Soviet officials. These buildings, like the Kremlin, are better heated and generally better cared for than most other domiciles, and the food served in them is slightly more abundant. Sentries guard the doors to prevent unauthorised visitors from gaining admission.

Many tenants, owing to the nature of their work, have automobiles at their disposal, which, however, are not always used only in time of duty. Indeed, on a gala night at the Moscow Grand Opera there are practically as many cars parked outside as there were in the old days—

LORD ALLENBY POLICIES IN EGYPT CLEAR UP SITUATION

Landowners Are Restive Under Supervision Of Local Politicians

DISORDERS ENDED

Allies Firm Stand In Turkey Has Also Been Calming Influence

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 13.—An authoritative statement, published this morning, says that it is believed that the situation in Egypt is clearing up. Apparently intensive political action has been exhausted and the Egyptians are facing the question of what advantages they have gained.

Both Egyptians and foreigners are realising how wise and far-seeing Lord Allenby's policy has been in unostentatiously quelling disturbances and enforcing martial law so discreetly.

Influential native landowners throughout the country are getting restive under the supervision of the politicians and are asking what harm the English have done to Egypt. They are admitting that their only hope of justice is through the English. Moreover the strong line taken by the Allies in Constantinople has been a calming influence.

PEOPLE'S BETTERMENT ONLY ISSUE AT STAKE

Finally the European Powers, the statement declares, must recognise the need to get down to practical business on a basis recognising that the material betterment of the people must be the chief concern of all involved.

London, April 12.—The Secretary of State for India announces that one of the terms of the Treaty of Peace with Afghanistan, signed on August 8 last, provided that, if the Afghans proved sincerely anxious to regain British friendship, the latter would be prepared to receive another Afghan Mission after seven months with a view to re-establishing satisfactory friendship. Since then Afghan politics had been obscured.

There had been little proof of a real wish on the part of the Afghan Government to cultivate friendship with Great Britain. However discussions between representatives of the two Governments with the limited object of clearing up misunderstandings and frankly examining any obstacles lying in the way of good relations and of preparing a foundation on which negotiations for "a Treaty of friendship" could be opened later, were about to be held at Mussoorie.

The conversations would be purely preliminary and formal. Mr. H. R. Conway Dobbs, Foreign Secretary to the Government of India, would head the British delegation.

London, April 12.—A drastic curtailment of the French claims in Asia Minor is foreshadowed.

It is understood that France is seeking regions where cultural and economic development are possible without military occupation and is now looking to China for which country M. Painleve is leaving shortly.

Students Continue To Strike; St. Mary's; To Reopen Tomorrow

There was no development yesterday in the strike situation here. Students held several meetings at the headquarters of the Students' Union to perfect their organisation while groups of speakers were out in Chinese territory delivering lectures.

Telegraphic communications from Nanking, Sunkiang, Tientsin, Soochow and Hangchow confirmed that students there have gone on strike.

Students at St. Mary's Hall, Jessfield, will call off the strike tomorrow and resume their studies. The Shanghai Baptist College also has put a time limit on the suspension of classes. Students there will resume study Wednesday.

BRITISH CREDITS AUTHORISED FOR OVERSEAS TRADE

Empire To Boost Its Own Commerce By Helping War-Torn Countries

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 13.—The House of Commons today agreed to the Government resolution in favor of authorising Government credits not exceeding £26,000,000 to re-establish overseas trade where it has suffered through the war, the credits to be exercisable within three years and repayable within six years.

Mr. W. C. Bridgeman, Parliamentary Secretary, Board of Trade, said that it was desired to help the countries crushed by the war. British trade would benefit and we should be able to extend our trade interests in various countries.

THROUGH BIG BANKS

He pointed out that the United States had made a similar provision of $1,000,000,000. The credits would be limited to British firms and business would be done through the big banks. Hitherto only a small sum had been advanced mainly in respect of textiles, iron and steel, rubber, leather and electrical goods.

London, April 13.—In the debate on the Civil Service estimates in the House of Commons today, Mr. J. W. W. Hopkins (St. Pancras, Unionist) drew attention to the foreign exchange value of sterling and suggested the taxation of imports of luxuries.

NEED FOR BIGGER TAX

Mr. Stanley Baldwin, Joint Financial Secretary of the Treasury, replying, emphasised that recovery from the present financial malady was bound to be long, slow and costly. He agreed that increased taxation was desirable but said that in his opinion the less interference there was with matters of currency the better.

Until debtor nations made their annual revenue balance their expenditure, no other efforts to improve the state of their currency would be of the slightest use. Mr. Baldwin pointed out that the British exchange position had greatly improved and emphasised that financial stability could only be achieved by economy and the increased production of necessaries

NEW ESTIMATED REVENUE

London, April 13.—The House Committee on the Taxation of War Wealth resumed its sittings today. Sir John Anderson, Chairman of the Board of Inland Revenue, submitted three alternative schemes to meet the suggestion that a liberal abatement, based on the amount of pre-war wealth, should be allowed to cover savings and in recognition of the diminished value of the £. The duty under each scale is limited in order not to reduce post-war wealth.

Under the first scale which would affect 45,000 people Sir John Anderson estimated that taxation would produce £45,000,000: Under the second, affecting 105,000, the estimated yield would be £700,000,000 and under the third, affecting 75,000 the estimated yield would be £300,000,000.

Sir John Anderson said that it was questionable whether it would be worth while facing the cost of the financial disturbance unless he could aim at a yield of £500,000,000. The Committee adjourned, after Sir John Anderson had promised to submit the result of his investigation into the effect of a levy on businesses.

GOVERNMENT MOVES TO END RAIL STRIKE IN AMERICA

Automobile Trucks May Be Used To Transport Life's Necessaries

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, April 13.—The Department of Justice has telegraphed to the executive officials of the Pennsylvania and New York Central Railroads asking for the names of the strikers particularly those of the leaders.

Washington, April 12.—Mr. Palmer, the Attorney-General, is taking up the question of Government action to end the railway strike which affects not only the railways but also various industries, the steelworkers for instance.

New York, April 12.—While the men on the Middle West railways are reported to be returning to work, the strike is spreading in other directions.

A semi-official estimate gives 40,000 as the number of railwaymen on strike and several hundred thousand others are consequently idle.

RAILWAY STRIKERS WANT 50 PERCENT WAGE RAISE

The National Council of Defense, which is planning an emergency organisation of motor-truck transportation lines, says that 45,000 Government trucks could be mobilised at short notice while 7,000,000 private trucks are also available.

Attorney-General Palmer has ordered Federal District Attorneys to investigate any unauthorised strikes to determine whether there has been joint action, designed to interfere with the distribution of the necessaries of life.

London, April 12.—The railwaymen on strike in the United States for the most part demand a 50 percent increase in wages and an eight-hour day.

NEW YORK FEARS OF FOOD FAMINE ALLAYED

New York, April 12.—The fears of a famine in New York owing to the railway strike have been allayed by the arrival of supplies. The hotels in New York are overcrowded with marooned passengers, and many people are sleeping in improvised beds in the

New York, April 12.—A telegram from Nogales (Arizona) states that the Congress of Sonora has proclaimed the State a Republic.

General Culles in a proclamation calls upon all soldiers in Sonora to resist the invasion of President Carranza's troops.

It is reported that the Congress of the State of Sinaloa has endorsed the action of Sonora.

Later.—A later telegram from Nogales states that Governor De la Huerta has announced that, while the State of Sonora has seceded from Mexico, it will return to the Mexican Republic upon the Federal Government guaranteeing not to infringe the rights of the State.

El Paso (Texas), April 11.—It is announced that Mexico has protested against the invasion of her territory by the presence of American warships in Magdalena Bay.

El Paso, April 13.—Eight hundred Mexican Federal troops have arrived in Juarez on their way to Aguaprieta, which has been captured by the Sonora revolutionaries. Mexican officials said that they would not ask for permission to pass through United States' territory.

Washington, April 12.—Information has been received by the State Department that the opponents of President Cabrera have taken Quatemala City after street fighting. The U. S. cruiser Tacoma and the submarine tender Nigara have landed parties of marines to protect the American Legation.

IRISH REBELS ON HUNGER STRIKE WORRY BRITAIN

O'Connor Fears Deplorable Results If Prisoners Die In Jail

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 12.—In the House of Commons today the Attorney-General for Ireland made a statement with regard to Sinn Fein prisoners who had been hunger-striking in Mountjoy Gaol.

The latest news was that the condition of the hunger-strikers was weak and that some were nearing the danger zone. There were 89 on hunger-strike out of a total of 151 so-called political prisoners.

The number under sentence was 70 and the number detained, including those awaiting trial was 81. The hunger-strikers included a number who had been convicted before an ordinary jury. All had been forewarned of the consequences of persisting in their conduct.

The Attorney-General mentioned that a similar strike commenced by Sinn Fein prisoners at Wormwood Scrubbs prison recently, had been abandoned.

CALLS GENERAL STRIKE

London, April 12.—The Executive of the Irish Trade-union Congress has called a general strike throughout Ireland for tomorrow, as a protest against the treatment of political prisoners and demanding their release. Newspapers, telegraphs, the food supply and humanitarian services will not be included in the strike.

London, April 13.—In the House of Commons today Mr. T. P. O'Connor, emphasised the gravity of the condition of the hunger strikers at Mountjoy prison, who, he declared should be treated as political prisoners. Mr. O'Connor said that the present system of military repression in Ireland had failed and had only driven the people to greater exasperation and revolt. He added that if the hunger strikers died, the effect upon an already inflamed people would be deplorable.

Mr. J. R. Clynes (Labor), supporting Mr. O'Connor, uttered a warning that there was a danger of the Labor action in Ireland spreading to this country.

SEES "SUICIDE ATTEMPTS"

Commander Carlyon Bellairs (Unionist) pointed out that the interned Bolsheviks at New York had behaved in a similar manner and that the American Government had pursued the same tactics as the British.

Colonel C. E. Yate (Unionist) pointed out that convictions in Ireland could not be procured owing to the terrorising of witnesses.

The Irish Attorney General urged that the arrests were in accordance with the law. The men were simply attempting suicide. Ameliorative treatment for convicted prisoners had been demanded, which Lord French had no power to give. Untried prisoners were treated under special rules. They would certainly be tried if possible, but in this connection the Attorney General re-emphasised the point made by Colonel Yate.

He defended the use of the military, pointing out that 10,000 constabulary were no longer able to maintain order. By the use of the military large stores of

French Action Has Given Spurt To Militarism, Offical Avers

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, April 12.—In the National Assembly today the Chancellor, Herr Mueller, in the course of a speech protesting against the occupation of Frankfort, accused France of breaking the Treaty of Versailles and discrediting the League of Nations.

The occupation, he said, had been undertaken without the sanction of the other signatories, without justification in the Treaty and in direct contradiction to the Protocol of December 8, which declared that post-war breaches of the Treaty were only punishable in accordance with the prescriptions of international law or the terms of the Treaty, which does not entitle individual signatories to invade Germany, while the Covenant of the League of Nations contends that hostilities are not allowable against a non-member of the League without prior appeal to the League Council.

PROTESTS AGAINST USE OF SENGALESE TROOPS

The Chancellor protested against France's use of Sengalese troops. He discredited the idea that the strength of the Entente, was declining.

Herr Mueller declared that the French occupation had stirred up the nationalistic instinct, giving fresh impetus to militarism in Germany. He added that Germany was negotiating with the Entente with a view to obtaining a prolongation until July 10 of the agreement permitting the retention of troops, on their present footing.

London, April 12.—Referring to the debate on the Ruhr incident in the House of Commons today, Mr. Bonar Law deprecated the discussion of isolated parts of the subject because, he said, the subject did not only affect Great Britain but also all the Allies.

HOUSE DROPS DEBATE TO AVOID OFFENSE

It was possible that developments might make a discussion of them advisable but he hoped not. If it did, the Government were quite ready to give an opportunity for discussion.

The House must realise that any statement in the House of Commons, especially by a member of the Government, apparently justifying our attitude, might have the appearance of criticising our Allies and also might convey to the German Government the idea that there was not complete agreement between the Allies regarding the importance of the Treaty.

The subject was dropped by the House.

BRITAIN WANTS APOLOGY FOR JOURNALIST'S ARREST

Paris, April 12.—It is understood that when the French evacuate Frankfort and Darmstadt they will likewise withdraw from Homburg and Hanau.

The German request for a three months extension of the period within which they shall begin disarming will be the first subject to be discussed at the Peace Conference at San Remo.

The French will endeavor to limit their occupation to towns on the Main and will be willing to withdraw their troops as soon as the German forces in the Ruhr are reduced to the normal.

Berlin, April 12.—The British Charge d'Affaires has presented a note demanding an apology and an indemnity for the arrest and maltreatment of the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian at Essen.

Coblenz, April 13.—A battalion of Belgian troops will arrive here tomorrow en route for Mayence.

FRENCH AND BRITISH AVER FIRM FRIENDSHIP

London, April 13.—M. Millerand, interviewed this evening in Paris, again emphasised that the recent minor divergence of opinion has in no wise affected the deep-rooted friendship between France and Great Britain. He pointed out that the French, living on the left bank of the Rhine, knew Germany intimately and he laid stress on the importance of a real Entente especially at present with a view to assuring the full execution of the Treaty of Versailles and solving a number of overseas problems.

France, he said, was ready to help Germany but the latter must show real willingness to carry out the Treaty. Hitherto she had done little respecting disarmament, war criminals, coal, the surrender of guns, etc., moreover the militarist spirit still exists in Germany. M. Millerand in conclusion said that the question of the occupation of the German towns had been finally settled between the British and the French and that "no bad feeling remains. Lord Derby is resuming his seat on the Conference of Ambassadors and unity is complete as ever it was."

Students On Trial For Peking Fracas

Six Hundred Of Their Fellows Ask To Be Jailed Saying They Also Are Guilty

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, April 14.—The trial of the 40 imprisoned students began yesterday and will continue for several days. Six hundred students attended the opening of the trial and in a body demanded that they should be arrested and imprisoned on the ground that they were equally guilty. The Court today posted a proclamation that such a request could not be entertained.

MILITARISTS IN EFFORT TO TIE WU'S BANKBOOK

Deposits Of $1,500,000 Are Said To Be Involved In Case In Court

Funds deposited by Dr. Wu Ting-fang in the local branch of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and claimed by the Canton government are to be held under an interim injunction until next Monday. This was the ruling made yesterday by Judge Skinner Turner in the British Supreme Court when the case came up on continuance from Monday.

Estimates place the amount of the deposits at $1,500,000.

Judge Turner announced that the temporary injunction would prevail until he hands down a decision in the controversy next Monday.

In the meantime, Dr. Wu is on his way here from Hongkong, where he encountered a similar suit instituted by the Cantonese, and is expected to arrive in Shanghai today on the steamer Katori Maru.

CHARGES AGAINST WU

The cases here and at Hongkong arose over a dispute between Dr. Wu, as Minister of Finance of the Southern Government, and the militarists at Canton. The Minister refused to surrender money the militarists claimed was due them under agreement with the Diplomatic Corps from customs and other revenues, the plaintiffs assert. They further charge that the doctor has deposited the funds in his own name and that he has no longer right to possession of the money. They base this assertion on the claim that he has abandoned his cabinet portfolio by leaving his post at the Southern Capital.

Dr. Wu has refused to admit the right of the Canton party to tamper with his bank accounts and has set up a vigorous protest both at Hongkong and in Shanghai against attempts to prevent him from having free access to moneys placed in the financial institutions in his name.

TOTALS 15 LACKS

When the case, which was filed here last Monday, was called up for hearing yesterday Dr. Wu was represented in court by Mr. S. Fessenden. Mr. Duncan McNeill appeared for the bank and Mr. R. N. Macleod appeared for the plaintiff. Mr. Chang Shih-chao, one of the peace delegates and a representative of the Canton military administration.

Mr. McNeill quoted several authorities supporting the contention of the bank that it had no right to heed the protests of any outsider who might object to a depositor withdrawing funds he had deposited in his own name.

Mr. Macleod was the one who estimated the amount involved in the local case at $1,500,000 saying he believed the deposits totaled 15 lacks.

Dingle's New Map Of China

The Far Eastern Geographical Establishment is about to issue a revised edition of Dingle's New Map of China, which is well known as the standard geographical work on this country.

Formerly this map was published only as a wall map, but this new edition is comprised in four sheets, each 31 inches by 43 inches, which may be used as separate maps of each section of the country, or mounted into one full map—a distinct advantage. It is interesting to note that The New Map of China is the only bi-lingual map in the world of a country, no less than 14,000 odd geographical points being shown in English and Chinese. In addition to showing everything that is geographically known of China, the map gives an exhaustive record of China's productions, the name of each production being engraved in the exact position where such is found, so that a complete study may be undertaken.

There is a growing demand for knowledge of China's economic growth, and Mr. Edwin J. Dingle, who has been engaged in this work for some years past, is to be congratulated upon having produced a work that must become increasingly popular among mercantile houses and official institutions throughout the world.

French School Head Gets Degree At Paris

M. Charles Maybon Takes Docteur-es-Lettres At University Of Paris

Monsieur Charles Maybon, head master of the French Municipal School, has just taken the degree of Doctor of Literature (Docteur-es-Lettres) at the Faculty of Literature of the University of Paris.

Monsieur Maybon sustained two theses which procured for him the highest honor and praise of the jury, which was presided over by Monsieur E. NINGPO VISITED BY ENVOY OF Y.W.C.A.

Miss Ruth Paxson Addresses Many Gatherings During Brief Stay

(China Press Correspondence)

Ningpo, April 10.—Ningpo has been favored this week by the visit of Miss Ruth Paxson to our city. Miss Paxson is known all over China in her connection with the Y. W. C. A., but just at present she is visiting the different cities of China in her capacity as honorary secretary of the Chinese Christian Home Missionary Society with its special emphasis on work in the province of Yunnan.

Last Tuesday evening Miss Paxson spoke before the Ningpo Missionary Association at its bimonthly meeting, and presented the work and conditions in Yunnan in an interesting, impressive and appealing manner. On Wednesday afternoon she spoke again in the Fu-zin Presbyterian church in the city at a union meeting representing all the churches in Ningpo, speaking this time to the Chinese and presenting the situation in Yunnan as a movement on the part of the Chinese church which has been and will continue to be exclusively maintained and supported by the Chinese church itself.

Thursday forenoon Miss Paxson spoke in the Fu-zin church to the Christians of the city on "The Victorious Life," and in the afternoon she addressed a Men's meeting in the North Bank Chapel. In the evening after the men's meeting the Christian Men's Club and the Women's Club held a reception at the home of Rev. and Mrs. F. R. Millican, when Miss Paxson had the opportunity of meeting more intimately many of the men and women of the city and the North Bank. Friday afternoon she spoke to an audience of women in the Presbyterian Women's Bible School Building on the North Bank.

In this meeting and also in the Men's meeting the day before she gave an invitation for all who would accept Christ to stand, and it was gratifying to see the large response to her invitation. Among those who stood up and thus declared their intention to become Christians there were not only students but there were men and women of influence and means in the city of Ningpo.

only they are all the property of the state and merely temporarily assigned to their individual users. Still, the fact that some individuals ride to the opera in limousines while the rest walk is necessarily productive of class division.

Already there is a slang term for the former—the proletarian bourgeoisie, they are called. It must not be supposed that the Soviet leaders spend much time in joy-riding or going to the theater. To my certain knowledge they are one of the hardest working groups of men and women in the world today. But it undoubtedly makes one think to see the lovely wife of Comrade So-and-So, resplendent in a set of superb sables and a bewitching toque that might have come straight from the Rue de la Paix, alighting from a glistening Rolls-Royce at the portals of the first "Soviet house," formerly the fashionable Hotel National.

Queer Class Distinctions

Such a spectacle is the exception and not the rule, of course, but then exceptions sometimes become rules.

Still more startling is an experience I had in one of the Government departments whither I went to lunch with an official who, not being a Communist, likes to poke fun at the Soviet inconsistencies. Noticing that there were two mess halls, I asked why.

"Well," he said, gravely, "the larger is for the common herd and the other is for the Communists." I once remarked to a high Foreign Office functionary that it was hard on Jacques Sadoul, the French Captain who has turned Bolshevist and has been condemned to death by a court martial in Paris, to be separated so long from his wife and children.

"Why doesn't he bring them here then?" the Communist queried. I said I fancied one reason was that Sadoul hesitated to expose his family to the hardships of Moscow life.

"That is absurd," was the indignant retort. "He is a member of the Third Internationale and a very important personage and as such his family would be lodged in the Kremlin and naturally get better food than the average person—in fact, they would have everything here they need."

In the governmental aristocracy must also be listed technicians and specialists who, if they do not live in the Kremlin, are otherwise far better off than the Bolshevik commissaries themselves, in that they draw much higher pay. Lenin, in common with all high Soviet officials, gets only six thousand rubles a month—less than the skilled workman can earn—whereas engineers, architects, doctors, scientists, artists, and even some lawyers are paid fifty thousand and more.

R. Keely, an American industrial efficiency expert who came to Russia four months ago to study industries under the Soviet system and who has given the Moscow Government technical advice with regard to factory management, received rations from four different official sources as a result of his complaint to Lenin that he was unable to live on the food supplied him at the start. He is one of the most envied individuals in Moscow.

ALL EXPERTS WAX RICH

I met a lawyer who had been legal representative of several factories before the revolution. Owing to his knowledge of administrative affairs of these concerns he was retained in the same capacity by their Soviet directors and was making, according to his own confession, larger fees than before—not merey larger in point of money paid him, of course, but larger in proportion to the cost of living. He was living at the rate of 3,000 rubles a day, so he must have been making fully 70,000 or 80,000 rubles a month. (It is practically impossible to accurately estimate the value of the Soviet ruble in American currency. The highest rate of exchange I was able to get was about 120 rubles to the dollar but it should be three or four values that today.

The theatrical artists are classified as specialists and receive enormous salaries, compared with non-specialist workers. Chaliapine, the celebrated basso, gets as high as 50,000 rubles for one concert. Ballet dancers are also of the "proletarian bourgeoisie," even the coryphees drawing 5,000 and 6,000 rubles a month. So much for the governmental aristocracy.

The aristocracy, or rather plutocracy, of speculation is quite as extensive though less clearly defined. Practically all Russians speculate to a greater or lesser extent. It is only the big speculators, those who derive all or a bulk of their income from speculative barter, however, who may be considered the charter members of the new aristocracy class. Every now and then some of them are jailed, and before the death sentence was abolished a few were shot, but the vast majority feel themselves quite safe, because they know the Government recognises them as a necessary evil. Why this should be I learned from my first encounter with one of the tribe. I made his acquaintance casually in a sort of cabaret—cafe (there are still a few such left in Moscow). He was a "Sovietski" man about town, a Moscow Diamond Jim Brady, and nightly he ensconced himself at the best table in the cafe, usually with a fair and much bejewelled companion, and dispensed four or five thousand rubles for food and non-alcoholic liquids between 9 and midnight—not a difficult feat when one realises that a glass of coffee and half a dozen cakes cost close to one thousand rubles there.

HOW PROFITEERS OPERATE

His "game" was obtaining from some secret source supplies of ink typewriter ribbons, carbon parer, &c., which he sold to the Government at an exorbitant price. Now if the Government were to arrest him for speculation the hidden manufacture of articles which it badly needed would cease, for manufacturers manufactured products from the cities. All the examples of speculation I have set forth above would be freely admitted by the Bolsheviks as being characteristic of the prevailing conditions.

FUTURE PEACE PROSPECTS

They insist, however, that at the worst the margin between the lowest wage and highest income is far narrower in the Soviet Republic than elsewhere. No Soviet employe legitimately draws a salary as big as that of the President of France, they aver, and no traders illegitimately equal the profits realised by capitalism in Europe and America. "There can never be a J. P. Morgan in Russia," they like to boast. Peace, coupled with industrial rehabilitation, they add, will eventually provide a government with enough manufactured goods to get on an adequate trading basis with the producers of foodstuffs and raw materials and so do away with speculators.

But the opponents of Bolshevism are inclined to the opposite view, which is that peace, depriving the dictators of an excuse for enforcing drastic measures and maintaining a huge army, is far likelier to afford greater opportunities for speculation since it will reopen communication with the outside world and bring foreign capital to Russia. The efficiency which the latter development is bound to bring to bear on the task of industrial reconstruction, it is argued, will react favorably on the aspirations of the Russian capitalist and help them to persuade the political powers to modify still further the Communist program.

A compromise on the part of the Soviets, according to this theory, will be inevitable, since the Bolsheviks cannot remain on top of the heap without bowing to the demands of realistic conditions. Into this belief there enters also the presumption that a Soviet aristocracy having been created about the Kremlin as a nucleus, this new ruling class will go a long way on the road to concessions rather than surrender its hard won privileges.

In a word the situation is this: Everybody in Russia, including the Bolsheviks, understands the need for foreign capitalistic assistance in rebuilding an almost wholly paralysed industrial organism; nobody save the Bolshevik believes that the new Russian capitalistic or speculator class can be suppressed in time of peace. Hence, what becomes of Communism as an immediate practical possibility?

neither legal knowledge nor experience."

ABOLITION OF COURT WOULD HARM REPUBLIC

I do not mean to make an extensive argument about extra-territoriality. To any foreigner or Chinese who keeps his eyes open it is unnecessary to make any argument. China's moral right to the eventual abolition of extra-territoriality no fair-minded human being disputes. Neither will one dispute its right to ask an assurance from the foreign Powers that they will agree to its abolition within a definite period if the judicial system of China is reformed and made reasonably safe and clean. But to talk of that now, when China's government has sunk to the lowest level of degradation, is to talk sheer absurdity. There is not a foreigner who could continue to remain and do business if the protection of his own courts were withdrawn. And if extra-territoriality were abolished also in the foreign concessions there is not a Chinese who would care to remain and say the kind of thing that is being said by the Chinese of Shanghai every day.

But why enlarge on obviousnesses? This is of importance only because it shows the harm that is done the cause of Young China by those who remain fatuously insulated against the realities of their own country—insulted by a layer of ill-digested foreign learning. Also it shows the misrepresentation of conditions in China of which Chinese living, traveling and talking abroad are so often guilty. An American in the United States, an Englishman in London reading a speech like that of Mr. Yeh's pictures to himself grasping foreigners insisting on illegitimate privileges in the face of a competent and reformed China.

FOREIGN HELP NEEDED NOW MORE THAN EVER

Well, foreigners have been guilty enough in the past and we have never been characterised by quixotic disinterestedness, but we cannot reasonably be asked to commit suicide now. And never has there been a time so unpropitious for requests for the waiving of foreign rights as now. Every intelligent Chinese knows that. And every intelligent Chinese must regret that there are others who go so far to substantiate the distrust of modern China that was voiced, for instance, at the ratepayers' meeting in Shanghai last week. There are Chinese who have proved their fitness for self-government and these will be yet more. The student movement will have its fruits. That is all the more reason why the foolishly vocal should be disavowed by the others.

Y.W.C.A. ASKS PUBLIC TO VIEW NEW BUILDING

Receptions Are To Be Held This Afternoon And On Friday

Residents of Shanghai are to be entertained at receptions to be held this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon from 4 o'clock to 7 o'clock at the Y.W.C.A. headquarters, 11A Quinsan Road. The object of the receptions is to give the public an opportunity to view the new buildings that have been provided to care for the rapidly expanding work of the organisation.

The difficulty has now been overcome and it is expected that the work of the organisation will be much more effective in the future than it has been in the past when handicapped by lack of room.

Programs for the receptions are to include music, speeches and exhibitions by students of the Y.W.C.A., Physical Training School. Refreshments will be served.

Mrs. H. C. Mei is to be the principal speaker at today's reception when the program will be for the most part in English.

Mrs. C. T. Wong will speak at the Friday reception when Chinese is to be the dominating feature of the program.

N.Y.K PLANNING EXPRESS SERVICE

Two Fast Steamers Will Be Put On Run Here From Nagasaki

The Nippon Yusen Kaisha has ordered two passenger steamers of a superior type from Glasgow. Shortly after announcing a plan for building or buying 500,000 tons of freighters and passenger ships during the next five years, the company ordered two freighters of 8,000 tons gross each from the Mitsubishi Shipyard and also three freighters of a similar size from the Yokohama Dockyard.

The passenger ships now ordered from England are to be used for the inauguration of an express passenger service between Nagasaki and Shanghai. The company originally intended to have them built at home, but not only are the leading shipbuilders in this country busy with the orders previously placed by other companies, but they find it difficult to obtain materials for the construction of the particular passenger boats wanted. As a result, the order has been given to a shipbuilding company of Glasgow.

The two passenger ships will each have a capacity of 4,500 tons gross, with a speed of 18 knots. Their price is not definitely known, but is believed to be between Yen 500 and Yen 600 per ton.

In pursuance of the program for the construction of 500,000 tons of new ships, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha has also contracted to buy three freighters—one of 6,400 tons deadweight from the Uraga Dockyards, and two of 11,000 tons deadweight each from the Yokohama Dockyard Company. The Uraga ship is valued at Yen 325 per ton and is to be delivered next July; the price of the two other ships is Yen 320 per ton one to be delivered in September and the other in October.

Baldridge Sketches Are Received Here

Copies of "I Was There," a book of sketches by C. Le Roy Baldridge, official artist of the American Expeditionary Forces, have been received in Shanghai and are on sale at Messrs. Edward Evans and Company. Additional interest attaches to the arrival of the books here as Mr. Baldridge was in Shanghai two months ago and made a trip through Shantung and Korea with Mr. Nathaniel Peffer, Peking correspondent of THE CHINA PRESS. He did several sketches which illustrated articles written by Mr. Peffer for Scribner's magazine.

"I Was There" includes drawings of people and events seen by Mr. Baldridge on various fronts, in rest billets, on the transports crossing and returning and at several points touched by the steamer on the trip from France to the United States, and includes color work and pencil sketches. The volume had a tremendous sale in the United States and will prove popular in China, particularly with ex-service men.

WAR DEPARTMENT SELLS TO SOVIET

Martens Bureau Buys 135,000 Pairs Of Army Shoes From It At $1.35 To $2 A Pair

'PRIVILEGE OF EXPORT'

Bureau Says That Was A Condition Of Bid And 'Apparently There Is No Objection'

New York, Feb. 20.—The wording of an official announcement of the War Department that a quantity of army shoes and overshoes had been sold to "The Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic, 110 West Fortieth Street, New York City," caused amusement in radical circles here, the inference being that whatever attitude the State Department might take, Secretary of War Baker had recognised the Lenin-Trotsky regime.

The address given is that of the bureau conducted by Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, so-called "Ambassador" from Soviet Russia, now being examined by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. Evans Clerk of the commercial department of that bureau yesterday confirmed the sale. He said the Soviet Government had successfully bid for 135,000 pairs of army shoes and overshoes, at $1.35 and $2 each.

"Our bid contained the address mentioned," Mr. Clark said. "When it was accepted we called up the officials of the Quartermaster Department in Washington and told them the goods were to be sent to Russia. They said they did not understand we were to ship the articles out of the country. We pointed out that the goods were of no use to us in the United States and that our bid was conditioned on the privilege of exporting. Apparently there is to be no objection, as we have heard nothing to the contrary."

Washington, Feb. 27.—In view of the decision of the United States Government not to trade with the Soviet Government the official announcement by the War Department today which told of the award to the Russian Soviet Government of a large number of surplus United States army shoes created great surprise. All the awards were made to "Russian Socialist Federal Republic," 110 West Forty-ninth Street, New York City. This is the address of the Soviet Bureau conducted by Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, the so-called "Soviet Ambassador," who is the official representative of the Bolshevik Government.

According to a statement this evening from Martens's office in Washington his bureau was informed by the War Department when it first expressed a desire to bid on surplus army goods that these goods could not be exported to Russia. Later, according to the statement made, the War Department informed the bureau that the goods could be exported.

The attitude of the State Department with regard to the action of the War Department could not be ascertained tonight. All that could be learned was that the State Department has apparently not indicated whether it will interpose objection to the exportation of the goods.

Far Eastern News Notes

American Copper Is Invading Japan Market

The Japan Gazette published at Yokohama, said on April 9:

On account of a sharp fall in the price of copper on the foreign market since last year, the copper refining industry in Japan is now said to be paralysed. Nearly all the small mines have suspended operations, and even the owners of large mines are experiencing difficulty in the carrying on of their business. At the Kosaka copper mine the monthly output is now reduced to 15,000,000 kin, and it is reported that the Osaka and Noshima Refineries, belonging to the Mitsu Bishi Company, have each curtailed their output from 20,000,000 to 10,000,000 kin. Other establishments are following suit in trying to cope with the situation. The manufacturing expenditure in the United States, where electricity is extensively used is much cheaper than in Japan, and there are indications that copper merchants in Japan are beginning to import refined copper from America.

American Vessels Lead In Shipping At Kobe

Says the Japan Chronicle of April 10:

The outstripping of British ships by American vessels and an increase in the movements of Japanese coasting ships are the outstanding features of the March shipping returns for Kobe, the center of the country's carrying trade.

Since the end of the war there has been a steady increase in the number of American merchant ships coming to Kobe, but up to February their number has always fallen short of British ships by three or four. In March, however, there were more American arrivals in Kobe than British. The American ships numbered 33, while 29 British vessels entered the harbor. The British tonnage, however, was slightly larger, amounting to 192,213 tons, as compared with 190,386 tons for the American vessels.

The American and British ships were followed by French vessels, which numbered only three, totaling 11,995 tons. Next came Holland also with three ships, totaling 18,363 tons. Besides, Italy, Russia, China, and Denmark each of whom accounted for one or two ships.

The total number of ships arriving in Kobe during March, including both foreign and Japanese ships, was 1,287, totaling 1,794,803 tons. Compared with the returns for February, the number shows an increase of 74, and the tonnage, 154,059 tons. The increase was principally due to the greater activities of Japanese coasting ships.

Soviet Has 1,300,000 Men Armed, Is Estimate

The Japan Advertiser of April 9 says:

Military experts estimate the strength of the Soviet forces, actually under arms at the present time, at about 1,300,000 men in all branches of the service. This force is divided as follows: Infantry, 880,000; Cavalry, 90,000; Artillery, 930 Batteries; Railway Corps, 25 battalions.

The forces are distributed into five armies and until the collapse of Denikin and Kolchak were operating on four different fronts. Since the downfall of the Denikin army in South Russia and the Kolchak army in the Urals as well as the Archangel and Murmansk expedition, the Reds have had only two forces to contend with the Poles and stray forces in the Ukraine.

At the present time there are under the provisional government of Vladivostok the following troops: at Habarovsk, 4,000 men and 30 guns; at Iman and in the vicinity, 2,000 men and 6 guns; at Nikolsk, 7,000 men and 17 guns; at Vladivostok, 6,000 men and 50 guns. This makes a total of 19,000 men and 103 guns.

The Japanese troops consist of approximately two divisions. The majority of the Thirteenth division, half of the Fourteenth division and the Ninth regiment at Otsu.

Servant Robs Safe In Canton High Court

The Canton Times of April 2 says:

Some time ago a sum of several hundred dollars was stolen from the safe in the High Court. As the stolen money was part of the several thousand dollars deposited in the safe, and no outsider could possibly get near, the Court did not therefore make known of the loss, but carefully watched the behavior of the men employed there.

A servant boy was noticed for his extravagance and was therefore suspected of stealing the money. The court sent a batch of police on March 29, to search his house, and arrested him and an elderly woman who was said to be his adopted mother. The boy confessed that he stole the money, and had still $270 buried in the ground of his house; and another $200 deposited in a certain pawn shop at the rate of 6 percent while the rest of the sum was spent. The money buried in his house was recovered, while the money deposited in the pawn shop has not hitherto been drawn.

Horse Sees Elephant And Dies Of Fright

Says the Siam Mail of March 27:

The remarkable case of a horse dying from fright at the sight of an elephant is recorded at Walsall. An elephant and two camels belonging to a well-known menagerie were passing along a road when a horse sighted the procession. It immediately shied and died on the spot. A veterinary surgeon expressed the opinion that the animal had died of fright.

Korean Bomb Thrower Is Sent To Prison

Says the Seoul Press of April 10:

Judgment on the case of Hong Kwoi and thirty-one other Korean "independence" agitators, who caused a disturbance in March last year and murdered a policeman at Suwon, was pronounced in Seoul Local Court on Wednesday at 9 a.m. Hong was sentenced to penal servitude for fifteen years, and the others to varying terms of shorter duration.

Japanese Grabbing Korea State Forests

The appropriation of land in Korea still continues. The Seoul Press states that certain Japanese in Pohang, North Kyongsangdo, recently obtained a lease of State-owned forest, 2,000 cho in area, in Yungtok District. Koreans of the locality thought it would deprive them of their source for obtaining fuel, and in protest against it, made for the District Office. Their march was checked midway by the police.

A similar affair is also reported from Kwangju, South Chonlado. Dissatisfied with the lease of the State-owned forest in Cheamsan, Tongmyon, Changheung, being given to Japan, some 1,000 Koreans besieged the District Office and demanded explanation. The police arrested 25 of them.

Over Two Million Are Stricken By Flu In Japan

The Japan Chronicle of April 11 says:

The total number of the victims of influenza, which has prevailed in this country since last winter, at one time with alarming virulence, is given as 2,155,292, of whom 107,682 cases proved fatal. The epidemic claimed the heaviest toll in Osaka, where 408,094 citizens were attacked, with 10,725 fatal cases.

Destroyer Is Launched At Nagasaki Plant

The Nagasaki Press of April 11 says:

Yesterday morning at eleven o'clock a destroyer was launched from the Nagasaki Works of the Mitsubishi Zosen Kaisha. Before the vessel was released from the ways Admiral Takarabe, Commander-in-Chief of the Sasebo Naval Port, read the Minister of the Navy's order for launching the ship and handed it to Mr. Shiba, General Menager of the Works. The new vessel was named Yakaze, meaning "arrow wind."

The Yakaze is one of three first-class destroyers ordered from the Nagasaki Works and one of which, the Sawakaze, is already in commission. The keel was laid on August 15, 1918, and the vessel will be completed by end of July. She is of 1,345 tons displacement, 320 feet in length, 29.3 feet in breadth, and will steam 34 knots an hour.

"I wish every woman knew how good Baby's Own Tablets are then there would be fewer sick children", writes Mrs. A. H. Waite, of 1207 Fremont Avenue, North Minneapolis, U.S.A. They do all that is claimed for them, and more, and I would not be without them for anything."

Hongkong Market

Messrs. Moxon and Taylor write as follows in their report dated April 9:

Our market opened on Tuesday, after the Easter holidays, with a slightly better tone, but also there are signs of improvement in prices the volume of business done has not been large.

Cables are coming through with greater frequency from London now, and a small sterling business has resulted.

The fear of dearer money, and the proposal to levy a tax on War fortunes in England have had a depressing effect on the London market, which has not passed away yet.

Oil shares and War Loans have been the chief sufferers.

In home financial papers there seems to be a good deal of controversy regarding the retail price of oil which is considered excessive. The oil companies seem to have the better of the argument as they say that there isn't sufficient oil in the world to go round, which statement is borne out by the case of America which produces 66 percent of the world's output and consumes 68 percent.

At the close, according to last advices from home, the oil market is weak, but there are indications that the bottom has been about reached, and it would appear that holders of good oil shares have nothing to fear as to the future.

With regard to our local market, cabled advices recently to hand would indicate that the price of raw sugar shows signs of an improvement.

The well known fact that there is a world shortage of this commodity has been rather accentuated by an estimated shortage in the Cuban crop.

Shanghai continues dull and lifeless.

The chief alterations from last week are:

Hongkong Banks.—Have buyers at $575 after business done at that rate.

Docks.—Have weakened to $154 done for cash.

Wharves.—Are stronger with buyers at $84.

Shanghai Docks.—Have been done at $131 for cash and $136 for June.

Unions.—Have come to business at $185 to a small extent.

China Sugars.—Have been done at $183 for cash and $190 for June.

Hongkong Lands.—Have changed hands at $105 for cash to a small extent.

Dairy Farms.—Are strong with keen buyers at $23, probably higher rates would be paid.

Exchange.—The demand selling rate on London is 4/10½ and the T.T. selling rate on Shanghai is 69½.

AUSTRALIA NEEDS 10,000,000 PEOPLE

Mark Sheldon, High Commissioner, Tells New Yorkers Of Country's Situation

NO CHANGE IN LIVING COST

Public Debt Interest Less Than 4 Percent—Settlers Needed

New York, Feb. 28.—"What Australia needs is not capital, but people," Mark Sheldon, High Commissioner in the United States for Australia, told the members of the Bond Club at their monthly luncheon yesterday at the Bankers' Club. "We have a population of about 5,000,000," he said, "and we could find employment almost over night for another 10,000,000. The resources of Australia hardly have been scratched, and if we had the additional population our production would go up tremendously and, incidentally, it would do much toward re-establishing sterling exchange at something close to parity within a very short time."

Mr. Sheldon, who was to have addressed the Bond Club a month ago, but was prevented from doing so by illness, was the only speaker yesterday.

The greater portion of his address had to do with the financial situation. The Australian public debt, Federal and State, before the war, he explained, was about $2,000,000,000. To this has been added approximately $1,750,000,000 of war debt in the last four or five years. Upwards of 90 percent of the pre-war debt represents money borrowed for the building of public utilities, such as railroads, water supply, docks, etc., and this is not only self-supporting but furnishes a surplus revenue which goes to help defray the ordinary cost of Government administration. Thus, the apparently huge public debt, compared to the small population, has been handled in an economical and efficient manner.

INTEREST UNDER 4 PERCENT

His hearers, all bond men, were surprised when he told them that the average rate of interest paid by Australia on its public debt was less than 4 percent. The pre-war debt averaged considerably less than this figure, and despite the fact that the war bonds have paid between 4½ and 5 percent the average is still under 4 percent.

Distribution of the debt, Mr Sheldon said, was most satisfactory. The pre-war debt is held to the extent of about 80 percent by Australians, with the remaining 20 percent held in England. Of the war debt, about one-third is held in Australia and two-thirds in England.

In Australia, the speaker continued, conditions are more nearly normal than in most other parts of the world. The cost of living has not mounted there the way it has in some other places, and this, Mr. Sheldon said, was due to two reasons; First, because there was little, if any, currency inflation; and second, because Australia produces most of the necessities of life and, despite tremendous exports, always has managed to keep enough for home consumption. Speaking of Australian currency, he said that at the present time there were outstanding about £55,000,000 currency notes, against which is held 44 percent gold cover.

"One reason we have been able to sell our public debt bonds so readily," he said, "is that the people have become accustomed to them and buy them with confidence. There is practically no speculation in these securities and nobody ever worries about market quotations."

STOCK EXCHANGE DEALINGS

Chief dealings on Australian Stock Exchanges are in bank stocks. There are about twenty large banks there, and all have their shares listed on the open markets. A feature of these banks, Mr. Sheldon pointed out, is that their shares are very widely distributed, with no large controlling interests existing. The banking system is modeled after that of Great Britain, with a few large banks having many branches all over the continent. By careful administration and through reduced costs of operation, he said, the banks are able to transact business on a narrow margin of profit. Formerly this was about 1 percent. Now it is about 1½ percent.

The foreign exchange situation, Mr. Sheldon said, was not a paramount factor in Australia. Virtually all Australian business with the world is cleared through London, and for this reason its exchange follows sterling. The heavy discount on sterling, through this operation, has forced, and is forcing, the dominions to trade "within the empire," and this fact ultimately will tend to force sterling back to its pre-war levels, in the opinion of the Australian High Commissioner.

Closing his address, Mr. Sheldon said he would like to call the attention of his auditors to the thrift of Australia. "We have a population of 5,000,000, and our savings banks have individual accounts totaling $2,500,000. The average account in our savings banks is $200."

The Situation In Europe

ACCORDING to The Nation (London) writing on February 21, the League of Nations at that date was regarded as a dead letter, and the hope of peace in Europe was centered in the Anglo-French Alliance. Confronted by this powerful alliance, the other nations of Europe including the neutrals, could do nothing. And America was inclining more and more to draw back into her own shell. Therefore the position then was approximately this, that if Britain and France should fall apart complete chaos would ensue. Only this alliance was maintaining some semblance of order.

Since that article was written, the German upheaval has taken place, and France has felt it necessary for the protection of her own interests, to occupy more German cities. Her further invasion of Germany without the consent of Britain led to a sharp exchange of notes between the two Allies. The latest Reuter's messages indicate that the misunderstanding thus created has been partly, at least, cleared away. But the end is not yet. Both Britain and France have been upset by the untoward development. They have disagreed but are showing that they are eager to make up, and there is every hope that they will succeed in doing so. Meanwhile, the general position in Europe before the break, as summed up by The Nation, is of special interest in view of what has transpired since. The Nation says:

The course is apt to be swift as well as erratic when Mr. Lloyd George is at the helm. Last week we drew from the declarations of Lord Curzon and Mr. Asquith the inference that the Treaty of Versailles is morally dead, since its eventual revision is inevitable. This week it seems superfluous to talk of revision. The Treaty is dead in the sense that no attempt will be made to enforce it. The meeting of the Allied Premiers in London has done its work with unusual promptitude and decision. It has, to all intents and purposes, cut the punitive clauses clean out of the settlement.

There is to be no further attempt to obtain the extradition either of the Kaiser or of the nine hundred "war-criminals." If Holland will be so obliging as to station a gendarme at the exile's garden gate, or, better still, if she would be so kind as to send him to Java, the Allies would esteem it a favor, but even this small favor is sought, so to speak, in a whisper, and in language so indirect that it might without gross rudeness be ignored altogether. As for the nine hundred, the Allies are prepared to wait for Germany to deal with them herself. If she tries them before her own High Court in Leipzig, no more will be heard of the demand for extradition, still less of the procedure so clearly defined in the Treaty for trial before courts-martial of the Allies.

A descent so rapid and complete from extravagance to common sense would be hard to parallel in the dealings of Great Powers with small neutrals and helpless enemies. Climbing down is commonly a more leisurely process, and the weary mountaineer generally halts at intermediate stages and takes his time about it in a vain effort to preserve his dignity. The Allies have not climbed down, they have leaped down, in one acrobatic bound. That in one sense was wise. The sooner everyone forgets that the original demands were ever made, the better will it be for all concerned. Since the descent had to be made, we grant that its rapidity is a merit. We keep our censures for the giddy folly which led the Supreme Four to the pinnacle.

The loss of prestige involved in the downward movement is serious. The military party in Germany has scored a big success. None the less the consequences of yielding will be infinitely less disastrous than the consequences of persistence. Had the Allies insisted on the extradition of the nine hundred, they would have destroyed the German Republic, and completed the ruin of Central Europe. Mr. Lloyd George is now undoing, as best he may, the follies of the General Election. The sooner he completes the process, the better for all concerned. "Hanging the Kaiser" is gone; it remains to discard the indemnity. That also is inevitable, and it cannot be long delayed. The Treaty is melting as rapidly as the Coalition's majority.

There are some grave inconveniences involved in making Treaties, which must be shed piecemeal within a month of ratification. The chief of them may turn out to be the French practice of demanding compensation, when they forego a "right" at our urgent request. The loss has to be made good to them in some other way. They have foregone the satisfaction of trying Hindenburg and Ludendorff, to oblige us, and the immediate result is the adoption of the French instead of the British recipe for dealing with the Turkish Empire. Both to our thinking are bad recipes, but the choice between policies ought to depend on some process more rational than this degrading barter. It is a ludicrous irony of fate that the Sultan should be enabled to keep Constantinople, because Mr. George must needs talk to the British electors of "hanging the Kaiser." That is none the less the sober fact. The comedy ran through several acts:

(1) Mr. George prepared to hang the Kaiser and his generals, and the French agreed.

(2) He next got ready to drive out the Turks, bag and baggage, and the French hotly dissented.

(3) He changed his mind about the Kaiser and generals, and the French objected to his changing his mind.

(4) The French allow him to change his mind about the Kaiser and generals on condition that he changes it also about the Turks.

(5) And in the final scene the rope which should have hanged the Kaiser pulls the drowning Sultan safely to dry land.

It is an amusing interlude, perhaps, but it reduces statesmanship to the level of farce. We are not sure that this will prove to be the last of the compensations due to France for this transaction. The loan of £200,000,000 is mentioned once again, and M. Millerand has not withdrawn his claim to occupy the Rhineland in perpetuity. By similar concessions Mr. George may, perhaps, succeed in inducing the French to yield in the much graver matter of the German indemnity, but one trembles to think of what the price will be in round millions. Never was democracy treated to a costlier diversion than the election of last December.

Meanwhile, the sudden reappearance of President Wilson upon the European stage introduces a new complication into our chaos. It is difficult to regard it otherwise than as a morbid phenomenon. . . .

The only result of Mr. Wilson's re-entry on the European scene, will be, we are afraid, his final disappearance from it. The Fiume question must be settled somehow, and a relatively bad settlement is worse than the disturbance that keeps both Italy and Jugo-Slavia mobilised and enables the brilliant buffoon D'Annunzio to defy both national and supernational authority. The probability now seems to be that the European Allies will adhere to the line they have taken, and Mr. Wilson will, in consequence, execute his threat of dissociating himself both from the Treaty and from the League.

In that case, he would, on what seem to us inadequate grounds, withdraw America from Europe even more completely than Senator Lodge would have done. How far it is really Fiume that moves him, and how far he is seeking to cut the knot of a domestic complication, one cannot venture to guess. The result will be that America is out of the Treaty and out of the League, at least until a new President comes to power in March, 1921. The repercussion of this decision on Europe may be incalculably heavy. It will drive the French to press still more urgently for the conclusion of a definite military alliance with ourselves. It will leave the destiny of Europe to the hazard of such secret bargaining as this Anglo-French trading of the Kaiser against the Sultan. It will condemn the League of Nations to be more than ever an irrelevant shadow, inconspicuous beside the reality of the Anglo-French ascendancy. It will make the small neutrals more than ever suspicious of the League. It will reduce the chances of the early admission to it of the ex-enemy States.

It means finally the last blow to the faint hope that remained of economic help from America to Europe. There is, however, one chance that good may come from this event. If America should choose as her next President a man with a constructive mind and a knowledge of Europe, above all, if that man is Mr. Hoover, he might make the delayed entry of America into the League, uncommitted to this disastrous Treaty, an occasion for demanding its revision as the price of her adherence.

Correspondence

'ONLY A BOY'

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Editor.—Through the medium of your correspondence column I should like to return to "Only a Girl" in as few words as possible my heartiest congratulations on her great achievement in composing such a minute reading picture of the figure in blue on our well known central thoroughfare. It is a known fact that the gentlemen in blue have a more thankless occupation than exists in any other public service. Nevertheless, I don't think they should be exposed to the sarcasm of "Only a Girl." I dare say 75 percent of the community do not realise the task which the F.P.C. has to perform "in protecting life and property." Who doesn't recall memories of the feeling that was held against British Tommies before the 4th day of August, 1914; later, as they were proclaimed saviors of universal freedom, the tide turned. However, I feel sure that the writer (of Beauty vs. Chivalry or Only the Brave Deserve the Fair), is not under British or American protection and I would recommend the fair lady to use her intellectual capacity in a more profitable and modern way than studying the "Chest and Foot measurements" of our Brave Gentlemen in Blue. I am, Sir,

ONLY A BOY.

Shanghai, April 15, 1920.

AN ADMIRER OF THE POLICE

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir.—Along with others, I note with interest the sarcasm thrown at the Shanghai Municipal Police by "Only a Girl" in her correspondence of the 14th inst. I dare say that there is not much prudence in, what she evidently thought to be, the "witty brushing" of the Foreign police officer. She criticises the officer for walking with a full chest and in a dignified manner. Pray, how would she have them walk; with stooping shoulders and a sorrowful countenance! I dare say if they did she would be among the first to offer criticism.

As to pushing the three Chinese from the sidewalk, there seems to be little cause for alarm so long as no bodily harm was done Some of the Chinese possibly need a little "pep."

It would be interesting to know if "Only a Girl" has never been trying to walk hurriedly along a "four foot" sidewalk when some native pedestrian was in front of her moving along at the pace of a snail. Did her "toes never begin to itch" under such circumstances!"

There are the usual exceptions, but Shanghai's foreign police force is the equal of any in the world, as a whole, in efficiency, neatness of appearance and good behavior. We should be thankful that we have these full chested, manly young men as our guardians of the peace.

"An American friend of the S.M.P."

VICE COMMISSION CHALLENGE

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—Four days have elapsed since the publication in your valued paper of Mr. C. W. C's. (An Indignant Englishman) open letter addressed to the Vice Commission, in which he made a specific challenge for them to prove the existence in Shanghai of even 12 houses of prostitution of which the inmates are either Portuguese or Eurasians, which I consider is sufficient time for a reply. None has come, either in pamphlet form or otherwise.

The community, irrespective of race, creed or color is undoubtedly in sympathy with the work of the Commission in its efforts to eradicate vice, but likewise this same community is indignant that a body of men and women amongst it should take it upon themselves to publish broadcast as facts things which do not exist and never did exist since Shanghai became a foreign settlement. I refer particularly to the published statement of the Vice Commission as to the existence, though not definitely known as to the number, of houses of prostitution wherein the inmates are Portuguese. Mr. C. W. C. has already challenged the commission, but the writer wishes to go further on record by asserting that there is not even one such house of Portuguese women in the whole territory comprising Shanghai. The police records from which the Vice Commission claims supportive evidence, will bear me.

I consider it a gross injustice that such particular reference should be made to the Portuguese women, and as father of a few of them, I strongly protest. The fact is that throughout the Far East where Portuguese settle, their standard of living and morals are above reproach, and there are few, if any, cases where they have been a burden on the community. In this respect, I need only to emphasise the axiom that "we are poor, proud but particular."

I had expected that from a more authoritative source in the Portuguese community a public acknowledgment would be made to Mr. C. W. C. for his defense of our community, but as none earlier has been made, I take it upon myself to do so, feeling sure that I am backed by the whole in confirming his published statements. Thanking you for the publication of this correspondence, I beg to remain,

Yours faithfully,

J. V. P.

China's Part In The Paris Conference: Part II.

First Story Of The Young Republic's Battle With The Big Five For Proper Recognition Of Its Rightful Claims

By M. T. Z. TYAU, LL.D.

THE public is now familiar with the provisions in the German Treaty relating to China, including the indefensible Shantung clauses; also how hard the Chinese delegates fought for their country's legitimate rights, and how they declined to sign except with reservations. All this is set forth clearly in the official summary supplied by the Chinese delegates. As regards China's desire to sign with reservations, namely reserving to the Republic its rights of re-opening the Shantung decision at a future date, it is interesting to note that as late as one day before the formal signature, namely on June 27, the Chinese delegates left no stone unturned to further their country's cause. Dr. Koo called on the French Foreign Minister, Mons. Pichon, who conveyed the Conference Chairman Mons. Clemenceau's message that the Chinese delegation could file their letter of reservation after signing the German treaty.

"Will this sort of reservation filed after signature have any effect?"

"In my opinion, it will be equally effective."

"If this is true, why will not the Conference receive our statement before instead of after signature?"

"The Chairman of the Conference has ruled that no statement in the nature of a reservation could be admitted before signature."

The next day, June 28, at 3 p.m., the final ceremony was to take place at Versailles. That same morning Mr. Hu Wei-teh, Minister to Paris, on behalf of the delegation attempted to negotiate with the Conference Secretary-General so that China's letter of reservation could be presented simultaneously with its delegates' signature; but his efforts were unsuccessful and the letter was politely declined. Under the circumstances the delegates had no other alternative but to stay away altogether from the ceremony.

As is well known, the Austrian Peace Treaty was signed on September 10 at St. Germain, when Minister Lu and Dr. C. T. Wang affixed their signatures and seals on behalf of the Chinese delegation.

Comparatively speaking, the Austrian treaty was smooth sailing and its provisions relating to China are similar to those of the German treaty, with the exception of the clauses relating to Tsingtao and the return of astronomical instruments removed from Peking. But even here China had to put up a stiff fight. For not only did the Austrian delegates put in a demand for revising some of the provisions greatly in their favor, but Italy also attempted to claim the ex-Austrian concession in Tientsin on various grounds. The Allied delegates for once were in unanimous support of this country. Italy then consented to withdraw its untenable claim but asked the Conference to request the Chinese Government so to administer the disputed territory that there would be no prejudice to the sanitary well-being of the Italian concession, etc.

On August 26, Dr. Koo called at the French Foreign Office and was received by the Chief of the Far Eastern Division. The latter advised the Chinese Government to lose no time in accomplishing the improvements desired by the Italian concession authorities so that on the one hand the Allied confidence in China's good faith might be indicated and, on the other, a good impression might be produced on the Allies favorable to an early consideration of the desiderata presented by China to the Conference.

The above was subsequently confirmed by an exchange of correspondence between the Conference Chairman and Minister Lu, the hope being expressed by the Supreme Council that the improvements desired would, in the interests of the Chinese and foreign populations in Tientsin, be carried through within one year after the treaty had been signed.

The German and Austrian treaties excepted the next item of importance in China's list of desiderata submitted to the Peace Conference early in March. A summary of them was published in the Far Eastern Press at this time last year, but it was just a bare recital of points without the arguments for their support. What actually happened was that these desiderata were all accompanied by a formidable list of cogent reasons and lucid explanations. For example, the Chinese text alone covers 21 Chinese pages or at least 52 English pages. These desiderata were grouped under the following headings:

1. Abolition of "spheres of influences."
2. Withdrawal of foreign troops and police.
3. Withdrawal of foreign post offices and telegraph as well as wireless stations.
4. Abolition of extraterritoriality.
5. Retrocession of leased territories.
6. Retrocession of foreign concessions and settlements.
7. Tariff autonomy.

Readers of the writer's former articles in THE CHINA PRESS outlining the foreigner's privileges and disabilities in China (see the author's treaties on "Legal Obligations arising out of Treaty Relations between China and Other States" and "China's New Constitution and International Problems") will no doubt be familiar with the many reasons which this country could with every justification advance to fortify its desiderata, but it is none the less noteworthy that China's case was presented to the Conference with all possible clearness. And the whole document is a dignified protest against not only the inequitable restrictions on the Republic's sovereignty but also the numerous deliberate violations of such acknowledged sovereignty.

It will be noticed that all reference to the Boxer Indemnity was omitted from the desiderata. This is explained in the official summary by the fact that the question had already been discussed before the technical commissions concerned, so that it was now a matter for individual negotiation between China and the other governments concerned.

As regards the abolition of extraterritoriality, China desired that the same should be consummated after five years when by that time the whole of her judical machinery would have been overhauled according to Western standards. And pending such abolition she hoped that (1) in the trial of cases where the accused or defendant was a Chinese, no foreign assessors should be present; and (2) writs, summonses and judgments of Chinese courts should have force within foreign settlements as well as foreign residences without the intervention of foreign consuls or other competent judicial authorities.

In this connection, according to the official minutes, it was explained by the technical adviser from the Ministry of Justice that his department had planned to promulgate the new Criminal Code in the first year, the new Civil Procedure in the second year, the new Criminal Procedure in the third year, the new Commercial Law in the fourth year, and the new Civil Code in the fifth year.

Concerning the restoration of foreign settlements and concessions, China hoped that pending such retrocession and as preparatory thereto the following procedure would be acted upon:

1. Chinese living within foreign settlements would be accorded equal rights as foreigners in the purchase of lands, etc.
2. Such Chinese would be accorded the right of representation on the local municipal councils.
3. Writs, summonses and judgments of Chinese courts situated outside the foreign settlements would be given equal force and validity inside the settlements without the intervention of foreign judicial authorities.
4. Foreign assessors should not be present at the trial of cases involving only Chinese living within the settlements.

As regards tariff autonomy the Republic hoped that the Allies would agree to the substitution after two years of the present by a national tariff. And pending the adoption of the national tariff a new temporary tariff might be established on the following recognised basis:

1. Preferential treatment should be mutual and reciprocal.
2. Luxuries should be taxed heaviest; then necessaries and, lastly, raw materials.
3. Necessaries should be taxed less than 12 and a half percent—that is as promised in 1902-1903 by Great Britain, the United States and Japan to make up for the deficit resulting from the abolition of the li-kin imposition.
4. At the expiration of this two-year period or whatever period should be mutually agreed upon, China would be free not only to revise the value of commodities but also establish a new tariff.

In return this country undertook to abolish all li-kin and other internal taxes so as to remove all artificial restrictions on trade and commerce.

As already stated, the above desiderata was submitted to the Conference in March. On the whole they were favorably received and the French Foreign Office, for example, said that the French Government was in cordial sympathy with at least several of such desiderata. On April 22, at a meeting of the Big Three, President Wilson thus substantially addressed himself to Minister Lu and Dr. Koo in the presence of Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau:

"As soon as the proposed League of Nations is established, we will give China all our assistance and aid her to remove all present inequalities as well as restrictions upon her legitimate rights so that the Republic shall really become a perfect independent, sovereign, great state . . . . Such sentiments, I am happy to say, are also shared by Baron Makino who will also be glad to assist in this worthy direction."

Such are the recorded sentiments of the Allied as well as Associated Governments. It is greatly to be hoped therefore that when this democracy of four hundred million inhabitants actually appeals to the League of Nations for redress and justice, the promised aid and assistance will be freely and cordially given.

As regards participation in the deliberations of the numerous committees, it will be remembered that Dr. Koo was elected by the small States to serve on the League of Nations Commission and Dr. C. T. Wang to serve on the International Ports and Waterways Commission. These were signal honors conferred upon the Chinese delegation and they partially assuaged the keen disappointment felt over the allotment of only two seats to China's delegates at the Peace Conference. Not much is recorded of Dr. Wang's share in the latter commission's activities, but in the activities of Dr. Koo at the former commission one gains an insight of the arduous labors of the committee which has set up an edifice intended to lay the foundations of the world's future peace.

In addition to these, China was also represented at the Economic Commission by Minister Alfred Sze, who was assisted by Councillor Hawling Yen, of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Mr. Quo Tai-ch'i, formerly Chief Secretary to Ex-President Li Yuan-hung. This commission being one of the most important and complicated bodies, its work was divided into various sections. Consequently Minister Sze devoted himself to the deliberations in the sections relating to the disposal of enemy property, pre-war debts, contracts and industrial rights, whilst Councillor Yen and Mr. Que devoted themselves respectively to the sections relatfng to customs duties, illegitimate warfare and economic agreements and disposal of enemy shipping as well as enemy persons.

China failed to secure representation on the International Labor Commission, although Minister Lu pointed out to the Conference that there were no less than one hundred and fifty thousand Chinese laborers who had assisted in the war. Since then, it will be remembered, Dr. Koo has been appointed by the Chinese Government to serve as the Chinese representative on the International Labor Conference.

China also was unrepresented on the Reparations Commission. Towards the end of March one of the American delegates pointed out that both the United States and China had not filed their indemnity claims against Germany. The former had definitely decided not to demand an indemnity for her military expenses; so what was the latter to do? The Chinese delegates conferred together and finally decided to refrain likewise from so filing, on account of the following reasons:

1. So that China's action would be in harmony with that of her sister Republic.
2. Since the declaration of war, China had admittedly not taken any active part in the war.
3. To waive the demand for an indemnity would strengthen China's claim for compensation and reparation of losses.
4. Since the Republic was hoping that the other Powers would waive their Boxer Indemnity, it was therefore impolitic for it to press for such indemnity.

Here is the bald statement of China's part in the Paris Conference. To be sure this part is small compared with that of many others; but it is yet one which is not without its effect upon the others associated with it. Diplomatically this country has not gained much; in fact, she has failed to get what is admittedly her proper due. Morally, however, she is the enviable gainer all around. Because of the Shantung decision the Allies are her moral debtors, and the world is her ardent well-wisher. Here is an ultimate asset which is worth so much more than Japan's empty diplomatic victory. Consequently the Republic is not without its glory.

We are told that this war has not ended in a military victory, nor in a diplomatic victory, but in a great moral victory. If so, China's part in the Peace Conference may justly be said to have culminated in a signal moral victory for one-third of the world's population.

Study Of Ears Both Interesting And Important—Close Attention To Care Of Hearing Very Necessary

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Take care of your ears! Deafness is an avoidable calamity, and its seeds are commonly sown in such seasons as this. A disease that affects the nose and throat is potentially an enemy to the sense of hearing. Every time you have a "cold in the head," look out for your ears. A very frequent cause of "cold in the head" is a chilling draft of air. Avoid such draft when you are riding in subway and other cars whose windows are kept open on the theory that in that way germs floating in the air can be got rid of.

Being partially deaf myself, as a final result of neglected "colds in the head" in childhood, I possess a ready test of the open car window's influence on the delicate machinery of the ears. Half-a-minute exposure to such a draft suffices to produce a feeling of "stuffiness" in the nose and ears and an increase of 50 percent in deafness. Of course there should be plenty of ventilation, but there are ways of supplying that without producing dangerous draft.

Everybody ought to get a book on anatomy, well furnished with informing pictures, and study the wonderful mechanism of the human ear. All of us are too incurious about this marvel of creative ingenuity which we carry in our heads, and use during every waking moment, and perhaps unconsciously during some sleeping moments, too. Truly, the eye seems a simple affair compared with the ear.

HEARING VERY COMPLICATED

Modern surgical science can almost make over the eye, but it can do comparatively little with the ear. The job that the eye has to do for us is, likewise, comparatively simple. The sense of sight calls for command over only about one octave of light-waves, while the sense of hearing ranges over ten or eleven octaves of sound-waves, and even the relatively restricted range of perception for musical sounds extends over six or seven octaves.

If this is not clear to all, let me explain that an octave in music includes all the vibrations between any chosen fundamental note and the note whose pitch, or frequency of vibration, is double the fundamental. Thus 16 vibrations per second may be taken as representing the greatest perceptible sound. Then 32 vibrations represent the beginning of the next octave above. But experiment proves that the ear can still perceive sounds whose vibrations per second amount to more than 30,000. To find how many octaves this includes we divide 30,000 by 16, which gives 1.875, and then we try how many times it is necessary to multiply 2 by itself, i.e., to what power we must raise 2, in order to obtain 1,875, and we find that it is between the tenth and eleventh power of 2; in other words, the ear perceives sounds ranging over nearly eleven octaves. But when the same principle is applied to the case of light, we find that the frequency of vibration by which the eye is affected is only double the lowest, so that the range of the eye is restricted to a single octave. The eye, then, though no doubt, upon the whole, a more important instrument of sense than the ear, is not required to deal with so wide a range of effects within its own field.

STUDY IS ENTERTAINING

The knowledge that you will obtain in studying the anatomy of your ears will be entertaining as well as useful. You will find that the ears are modified organs, bearing marks of your descent. When you put your finger on "Darwin's tubercle," on the rim of your ear, you will be interested to know that science says it "represents the folded-over apex of a prick-eared ancestor." See if you can find it. It is a kind of mile-stone measuring the progress of your race.

Learn what the "meatus" is. It will be a useful Latin addition to your vocabulary, with wide relations, which will save many an unnecessary trip to the dictionary—a master-key to the meaning of a whole group of scientific terms.

From the time that you pass the "drum," with the "anvil" and the "hammer," you will be in a little wonder-world of marvellous machinery. You will enter the "vestibule," you will see the mysterious "fenestra" (window), the "aqueducts," the "spirals," the "hooks," the three "semi-circular canals," the mystic fluids, "perilymph" and "endolymph," which only the Divine Chemist can compound, the "nerve-twigs," "hair-cells," the "crystals of carbonate of lime" (how strange), and then, the secret place that contains the wonder of wonders, the essential organ of hearing, the "Organ of Corti."

There you will find three or four doctors' names hung up for immortality in this deep inner chamber like the golden hieroglyphics on the walls of a king's tomb in the rocky heart of a hill on the Nile.

Peels Off Corns Between Toes

The Great Corn Loosener of the Age. Never Fails. Painless.

A corn mashed, squeezed and crushed, all day long, in between two toes! You can try the desperate way and try to dig it out and fail. Or,

"Two Drops of 'Gets-It,'—That's All!"

you can try the sensible, peaceful, painless, easy way and use "Gets-It." It is easy for you with "Gets-It" to remove corns in places difficult to reach. "Gets-It" is a liquid—a wonderful painless formula—it has never been successfully imitated. It settles on the corn, and dries immediately. Instead of digging out the corn, you peel it out painlessly. There is no sticky plaster that does not remain in position, no salve that irritates or rubs off. You reach the corn easily with the little glass rod in the cork of every "Gets-It" bottle. It does not hurt the true flesh. Try it, walk comfortably and smile! It is a blessing; never fails.

"Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover. The only sure way, costs but a trifle at all chemists and stores. M'f'd by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, U. S. A.

A Homely Tragedy Of Tears

BY SAM HELLMAN

Mrs. Hood's eyelids were red with weeping. The supper was rapidly growing cold on the table. John had never been so late before. Something must have happened. The front doorbell rang, and dabbing at her eyes with a napkin, Mrs. Hood went to answer.

It was not John. It was a boy with a note, and before Mrs. Hood could frame a question on her quivering lips he had darted down the steps and vanished. The tears welled to Mrs. Hood's eyes, and through the mist she reads:

"Dear Mary: I am not coming home to-night nor any night. You will never see me again. I have had a terrible business reverse. You had better go home to your parents. They are amply able to provide for you. I am not, and probably never will be able to again. I am through and shall leave the city to-night.

"I am writing this instead of coming home and telling it to you because I am afraid of you—of your tears. For three years you have surrounded me in a sea of tears and I am not in the mood to stand any more of it. That's the chief reason I am going away. Perhaps if I had had a wife who could have smiled when I was down-hearted or cheered me up when I was tired I might have pulled through; but with you it has been tears, tears, tears—tears when I have been glad and tears when I have been sad, nothing but tears.

"An hour after you were married you cried because we missed our train. The whole honeymoon was a vale of tears, tears because your dress didn't fit, tears because the meal was not good and tears just because. Your constant weeping has taken the heart right out of me.

"I once saw a play called 'The Tyranny of Tears,' where a woman obtained everything she wished from her husband by weeping. You not only have gotten everything you wished from me through crying, but you have got my backbone and nerve as well. You have washed me away in your tears.

"Perhaps I have been responsible for your constant weeping. If that is true you will be pleased at my decision. But I do not think it has been my fault. I have tried, tried hard to please you in every little particular, but you always found a cause for tears. Even when you had every reason to be happy you cried.

"When we were married I had a good job at Holbrook's. You wanted me to get into business for myself. Had I stayed with Holbrook I would now have been a full partner. But no, you would not let me. You cried about it in the morning and you met me with tears in the evening. You wept away my determination, and, finally, had your way.

"Here's what has happened. All the money I borrowed to go in business for myself has been swept away and I owe everybody. I haven't even enough money left to go into bankruptcy. So much for your tears. During the last few months if you had stood by me with a smile I might have pulled through, but what was the use? If I had succeeded you would have wept because of the struggle I had had. Now that I have failed——

"Well, good-bye, Mary. It may be my fault. I wish you all the happiness in the world. "JOHN."

Mary was dry-eyed when she finished the letter. The blow had left her pale and cold, but there were no tears. She went to the telephone.

"Main' 45675, Is that you, John? See, I'm not crying. Come home. I'll never cry again. Please do, John. Never, I promise. I only cried because I liked to be petted, and you always petted me when I cried. I'll never do it again. Right away, John. All right, I'll warm up the supper. Good; I knew my boy couldn't be put out. Of course, you can straighten things out. Come, quick, dearie, and see now happy I can be. Good-bye."

Mary was smiling when she left the telephone and walked into the dining room.

"Get down, Pussy."

The cat was on the table, chewing on the cold chop. At her cry the pet seized the meat and fled from the home.

Mary sat down at the table buried her head in her arms, and wept.

Today -:- By Arthur Brisbane

The shortage of money worries the country. Printing presses have been turning out nice fresh money by the hundreds of millions since the war started, therefore the shortage puzzles people, but it need not.

Otto H. Kahn, an able young banker, who has solved his individual currency problem, put the fundamental fact in a half minute's telephone conversation yesterday. Said he, "The Government which doesn't need credit gathers in all the available cash by its income tax system, squanders it, and business men actually haven't the ready money with which to develop industry and carry on the work of reconstruction.

"Suppose a gigantically rich man, with unlimited credit and money, had around him a lot of small farmers, needing cash to buy seed, agricultural machinery, fertilliser, etc. Suppose that rich man, controlling the little farmers, took from them every dollar of cash as fast as they got it, and used it in his business, leaving them with no cash and little credit, how do you think they would prosper?

"That is what happens in the United States. The Government sends its agents collecting as income tax practically all the ready cash, and often more. If a concern makes 25 percent in the year, not more than 10 percent is actual cash, the rest goes into increased plant, deferred payments, etc. But of the 25 percent, half or nearly half must go to the Government, in actual cash. "If you haven't got it, borrow it."

Should the income tax be done away with or cut down? By no means. It is the fairest tax, the absolutely just tax. It will remain.

Should taxes be laid alike on big and little incomes? By no means. The load should be put on backs able to carry it. The rich man can carry the load, he receives greater insurance and protection from Government than the little man, and should pay in proportion.

You cannot always trust protests or opinions of the very rich regarding income taxes, "for every one is as God has made him, and oftentimes a great deal worse," as Sancho Panza says. A big percentage of income tax payers would gladly wriggle out on any pretext.

But the Government is too earnest a collector of ready cash. Every year it puts its hand into the industrial and commercial game of the United States, and takes away practically all of the "chips" or ready money with which the game is run.

Business men are bidding for credit at usurious rates of interest. Men with money to lend are not only permitted but invited to profiteer.

Concerns absolutely sound, wishing to increase their enterprises, thus giving work, and increasing production, must go to the bank like a vagabond pawning his coat, grateful for what he gets and willing to pay any rate demanded.

This system is forced upon the financial institutions of the country; they do not want it.

If one great capitalist surrounded by thousands of little men arranged once or twice every year to take all the cash they had, he would ruin them in the end and keep money tight all the time. The United States Government, with wealth and credit unlimited, surrounded by millions of little men, spends millions annually collecting all ready cash from the little men, raking it in, squandering it shamefully.

It is for collective wisdom to decide how the load of taxation can be placed properly on wealth through graduated income tax, without criminal wastefulness by the Government and without taking from business men, big and little, all the cash there is in the business.

Until that problem is settled, money will be tight, business bad, and things getting worse.

Private owners have their railroads back. The Government, which means you and the other taxpayers, paid full dividends to the private owners while the Government held the roads. The taxpayers carried the roads through a period when the owners couldn't possible have borrowed money, could not have solved their financial or labor problems and when, without the Government's support, that is to say without the use of your pocket-book, one-half the railroads, at least, would have gone bankrupt.

While Government carried these railroads for the private owners nine hundred million dollars of your money was spent on those roads. You hope, perhaps, that private ownership will show gratitude. If so, you hope foolishly.

Private ownership of railroads means private exploitation of a public necessity. It means big profit for big insiders on the things that the railroads buy. It means big salaries for people "to be taken care of." It means bribing legislators. It means favoring the big shipper against the little shipper.

The Secret Of The Trance

BY BRICE BELDEN, M. D.

Trance sometimes resembles death very closely, and, in fact trance does end fatally at times.

Consciousness in a trance may be entirely abolished. The face is extremely pale. The limbs usually remain flaccid, but may be rigid or show spasmodic movements. The pupils may be dilated and immobile. Sensation, although frequently retained or heightened, may be abolished. The pulse and respiration may become temporarily imperceptible.

The combination of these symptoms persisting for some hours may present a very close resemblance to death. There are three tests, however, which serve to distinguish the two states from each other—the absence of signs of decomposition, the persistence of the excitability of the muscles to electricity and the normal appearance of the interior of the eye as viewed with the ophthalmoscope.

Very little is known as to the real basis of trance. Something happens to render the nerve cells controlling the higher physic functions inactive, and then the morbid state spreads to the lower centers in varying degree.

A partial physiologic counterpart of trance is to be seen in the hibernation of some animals. Observation of such animals shows that when the heart-beats fall to eight or ten a minute the respirations are still lower and the temperature is sub-normal. It may be that trance in human beings is in some sense nothing but a recurrence of the hibernation which at a low stage of our evolution was shared in common with other animal life. According to this view trance becomes a further proof of the doctrine of evolution.

It is said that some Indian fakirs have the power of holding their breath and passing into a stage of trance in which the heart sounds become inaudible.

Cheyne, a famous English physician, has reported a well-authenticated and very peculiar case of voluntary suspension of the heart's action and respiration in the person of a Colonel Townsend.

Bishop Darlington Asserts Holders Of Bonds Decided Constantinople's Fate

PROTEST MASS MEETING

Held Despite Hint From Washington—Dr. Manning Criticises Supreme Council

New York, March 1.—A large holding of Turkish bonds in France was the reason the Supreme Council decided to permit the Turk to remain in Constantinople, according to information reaching the Rt. Rev. J. H. Darlington, Episcopal Bishop of Western Pennsylvania, who addressed an emergency mass meeting held yesterday afternoon in the Synod Hall of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, for the purpose of protesting against retaining Turkey in Constantinople and the non-fulfillment of allied pledges to Armenia.

Bishop Darlington said he gleaned his information from well informed individuals who returned recently from abroad. The general opinion among them, he said, was that millions of Turkish bonds would be worth nothing unless a mortgage was placed on Constantinople. From 60 to 65 percent of all the bonds, he said, were in the hands of Frenchmen, according to his informants.

"We all love France for the part she played in the war," the Bishop continued, "and we shall continue to sing her praises, but we ought to let it be known today that while we love and we will take her hand we will not take one hand while the other is bloody with the blood of poor Armenians. We must let it be known to France and England that they must give justice to the Christian nation that supported them and that the Turk must be driven from Europe."

Although the meeting was arranged on forty-eight hours notice the Synod Hall was crowded to capacity, and more than 500 men and women applauded enthusiastically attacks on the cruelty of the Turks, and the expression of hope that the Supreme Council would carry out its pledges to Armenia.

The other speakers were Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Church, and Captain George B. Hyde, who observed the results of Turkish cruelty while attached to the Red Cross in Turkey.

WASHINGTON HINT IGNORED

The meeting was held in spite of a strong hint from Washington that it would be advisable not to hold it at the present time for fear of embarrassing our Allies. It was reported that Henry Morgenthau, former Ambassador to Turkey, had originally been expected to be one of the speakers but that he cancelled the appointment because of word from Washington. Mr. Morgenthau said last night that he did not accept the invitation to speak but that he was preparing his views on the subject and would make them public on Thursday night at a dinner of the Near East Relief at the Hotel Biltmore.

Mr. Morgenthau admitted that the authorities at Washington at the present time did not desire protest meetings to be held on the decision of the Supreme Council to permit the Turk to remain in Constantinople.

A resolution was adopted calling for the expulsion of the Turk from Europe It said that Armenia was receiving one-eighth of the territory originally assigned to it. Mr. Manning was instructed to forward the resolution of protest to President Wilson and the Supreme Council.

The action of the Supreme Council, said Dr. Manning in his address, left the Armenians with no hope for the future. No single argument for the retention of the Turk in Europe, he said, could stand the light, and his presence there was a monument to old diplomacy at its worst. "The old diplomacy of expediency, self-interest and mutual distrust."

"I say that rather than see the Armenians left in the hands of Turkey, we would reopen the war tomorrow and fight it till an end of Turkey and all she stands for in the world," he exclaimed. Prolonged applause greeted the sentiment.

RIDICULES TURKS' ARGUMENT

Captain Hyde said the argument used to justify the retention of Constantinople by the Turks was so childish that it was time this bubble was punctured. The city had never been considered a sacred shrine of Islam, he asserted. But such consideration never prevented the Allies during the war from throwing the Turks out of three real holy places, Mecca, Medina and Jerusalem.

The speaker denied that keeping the Turk from Constantinople would rouse the resentment of 70,000,000 of Mohammedans elsewhere. The best thought of Islam, he declared, denounced the influence of the Turk in Islam, and longed for the day when the permanent influence of the Turk or their religion would be wiped out.

The Turks were trying to do what they always did, escape just punishment because of dispute among their enemies, he said.

Captain Post ridiculed the idea of a separate Kurdish State. These cruel people were wanderers, he said; had never had a nationalist movement and did not ask for recognition, but today the powers have assigned a larger place to the Kurds than to their stanch allies, the Armenians.

Among those who sent messages sympathising with the purpose of the meeting were U.S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Walter George Smith, former President of the American Bar Association; Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University; A. Lawrence Lowell, President of Harvard University; Alton B. Parker, Gifford Pinchot, Cardinal Gibbons, Myron T. Herrick, Dr. Ernest M. Stires, John Grier Hibben, President of Princeton University; Lyman Abbott, Dr. Joseph Silverman and Dr. Charles E. Jefferson.
